General Comment

OpenAI is a company whose entire business model is based on the ingestion of copyrighted material in order to distribute derivative works based on that copyrighted material. Their attempts to stretch the fair use clause of the DMCA is analogous to a high school student taking the words of an accomplished writer wholesale and swapping out a few choice words to make it "their own." Allowing OpenAI to run rampant through the artistic history of America and the World would be utterly disastrous for all creative economies. Art would be completely devalued to the point of no return and entire economic ecosystems will inevitably collapse if they are allowed to move forward. End this nonsense and protect American artists, musicians and writers from this blatant theft and plagiarism disguised as "leveling the playing field."
