General Comment

AI has a place in helping medicine, but the work of generative AI to essentially steal legitimately-done works on the Internet and mash them up into soulless, lazily-made content that wants to be called "art" but does not deserve to be called such is nothing but a pox on the world. It saps intense amounts of energy in order to do this at well, and does nothing to improve society as much as continue to harm it. Creative works are beloved mainly because actual, living people create them, not soulless generative AI that the world is continuing to hate with a passion, especially among investors starting to abandon endeavors and seeing the AI bubble is about to pop.

Generative AI cannot exist without theft. It does not deserve to exist, and to entertain such an idea from an executive order from someone who has shown to have no knowledge in what he is doing with such an order is nothing but self-destructive.

America runs on entertainment, and people will learn when they are seeing soulless junk. Pushing generative AI in the US is the same as poisoning this country, which is not ideal. Do the right thing and do not allow corporations/thieves to continue to beat up America and embarrass it further in the eyes of others. We are not fooled by what is going on with this faulty technology, and it's time to start to condemn generative AI to it's inevitable doom while saving true artists: writers, painters, digital artists, voice actors, etc. Promote real people, not generative AI.
