General Comment

American AI companies and any company for that matter has to respect an artist, creator, writers, and creatives consent to use their images. They MUST obtain the image rights from every single person they use an image to. Similar to how these companies want to protect their "product", this is OUR product and it must be respected. They must be held accountable for scraping data without our consent or recompense. These companies are so focused on "line go up" that they would sacrifice their morals and ethics, but its just wrong. We have a say on how our work is used, respect our decision to opt off being scraped or pay us.

This will only cause a domino effect of corporations further exploiting artists if these companies are allowed to do whatever they want.
