General Comment

As a creative professional, I am entirely self-made. I came from poverty and lifted myself up by my proverbial bootstraps.

AI is a direct threat and insult to that perseverance; the American spirit of self-determined success. It works by scraping what people like myself have spent our lives making, steals that work, and then spits out a “product” that has no utility, that seeks to “solve” a non-existent problem. Not only does it threaten the livelihood of people like myself, (a hard-working, self-made small business owner), but it seeks to do so using our own work. That theft must not and cannot be allowed to take place without threat of legal action from us makers who create things from our blood, sweat, tears, and labor. Period. This is all not even to mention the environmental toll the software takes with each use.

To allow this farcical technology to keep existing off of the backs of our labor is un-American in every way, and it is your duty to disallow its use of existing copyrighted works.

Thank you.
