General Comment

Allowing any one group to access any data or creative work they want with no regard for copyright laws, then allowing this material to be used in training programs whose sole purpose is attempting to mimic that data, sets a dangerous precedent that would see the creatives of this world driven to poverty for the sake of free labor. Furthermore, I feel the timing of this comment window is inadequate for the severity of these implications, being far too short of a window at an irregular time and date to have the full reach it deserves.
