General Comment

AI is nothing but vague promises that something that has no actual use to the common person will miraculously become the most important thing ever and create all the money possible if it's simply allowed to break the law. If any other industry came crawling to the government and begged for this kind of special treatment it would be laughed out of the room and given a kick in the butt for its troubles. AI is a complete fad industry that silicone valley will drop in three years if even then and I will not stand for it to be given these exemptions from the law because it promises everything while having delivered nothing for over a year. Do not give AI exemption from copyright law. It should have to pay for using other people's works just like films pay actors and animators.
