General Comment

America's "AI Dominance" isn't worth destroying copyright law irrevocably even if the AI industry was capable of producing anything meaningful, which it isn't. It is a group of con men and carnival barkers selling the American people a Mechanical Turk that pretends to create art.

LLMs are always prone to hallucination, and pouring billions of dollars and our entire cultural history into a mulcher for the sake of some Silicon Valley snakes is an idea I reject whole-heartedly. The AI bubble is soon to burst, and if we escape with our cultural power intact, shielded from the grasping hands of Big Tech, that's worth celebrating. I urge all parties involved to reject this bill.
