General Comment

If art made by humans supposedly isn't valuable, then why is it so important that it's given to them for free?

This proposal to legalize theft is rife for abuse and enables widescale infringement from all creative works. While the people pushing for theft to be made legal probably do not see stealing from smaller artists as a big deal, surely, surely you can see the potential issue you're going to face when you're stealing from Disney.

Anything that needs to steal from other people's effort and labor to exist should not exist at all. This is not difficult.
