General Comment

AI companies should be held to the same copyright and intellectual property standards as any individual. It is not okay for them to train models on copyrighted content. It is not okay for them to steal from artists and then take the jobs from the very artists whose work provided the training material, without their consent. AI is nothing less than a massive grift. It will not benefit the American people in any way, and OpenAI should be held legally liable for the damage they have already done.
