General Comment

While I will be using "I" throughout this comment, I know that my thoughts are shared by the rest of the art community. I have spent my entire life honing both my craft and my voice in the arts. I have done so through hard work, and a conscious and cultivated choosing of things to be inspired by and to incorporate into my own work. For every influence I wanted to emulate or learn from, I had to choose others not to pursue, as I am only human and only have so much time and energy to put towards my work. That AI can simply scrape every piece of work I've ever created and feed it into its algorithm so that any person can just "request" an image by me is disgusting. AI is the worst possible version of a middle man. It takes without asking, and gives nothing in return to who it takes from. That image created by AI vomiting back out an approximation of my work; it doesn't exist without my work in the first place, yet I receive no compensation for its production. In what world is that fair? There is no such world. This is simply a tool to Hoover up skilled labor at literally zero cost, and regurgitate it out at anyone's request. Without going into a complete tangent, that alone is another problem: an artist's work is their voice. I shudder to think at an AI generated image in my voice showing support for a cause I abhor. We've already seen this in the pornography industry, with celebrities being Deepfaked into pornographic films without their consent. Now with generative AI someone could conjure up a "drawing" by me involving two minors having sex. Through no choice of my own, there would now be a highly offensive and disturbing image out there that laypeople would think that I produced.

Everything about this is disgusting, and I beg you to refuse to approve it.
