General Comment

AI uses far too many resources for too little return, suffocating all kinds of parts of society in ways that are both unpleasant and lead to self-destruction. Children use ChatGPT to write essays so they never have to learn, people use ChatGPT instead of doing their own actual research and ignorantly accept whatever it says even when it's going to poison them, scammers and grifters use genAI to produce pointless products no one wants, plagiarists use genAI to copy the work of others and steal revenue to the point where these companies are battling a ton of lawsuits because they violate fair use constantly...and then there are the employers struggling to find good employees because everyone's using AI to write resumes that don't even reflect their actual skillsets, job seekers struggling to be seen at companies because they're also buried under the deluge of fake resumes that employers are now using more AI to sift through...never mind the fact that they aren't even obeying environmental regulations and using up water while putting a huge strain on power grids...

I mean, where does it end? It needs to be regulated. To simply let them run roughshod over literally every aspect of society for the sake of them making money (and currently they are LOSING money so much that it's a real wonder why they're still getting funding). I know business owners would love to just stop paying workers so they can pocket everything, but that is literally just being a cancer cell that will eventually kill the living thing it's stealing resources from. The only reason they're sucking up to Trump is because IT'S INCREDIBLY EASY TO MANIPULATE THIS ENORMOUS COWARD so they're schmoozing so they can keep up their revenue stream regardless of the harm it's doing across all levels of society. 'We have to keep ahead of the AI race!' They've already lost the race by abusing working American citizens and forming an immense reliance on copyrighted work to the point where they have to sneakily force everyone into an auto-opt-in system so they can steal with impunity. The opt-out features don't even work on half these sites because so many people don't want to opt-in to have their data stolen.

This isn't sustainable. Regulate it or things will get very, very bad.
