General Comment

As an educator and advocate for artists, I find this abhorrent. The idea that LLM's models can draw on and explicitly use the works of artists, writers, filmmakers, and other creative with impunity is legally flawed, morally bankrupt, and driven by the unending ambitions of billionaire tech-magnates and their aspirants. It is violation of integrity that hands the bard work of cultural composers to the inexperienced (if you can even use that kind of language about an LLM). This strips the rights away from creators, something this country has always seen as sacrosanct. If this is the case why aren't all works in The Public Domain? Why is it only through the manipulation of these LLM tools that copyright no longer matters? This plan is abhorrent and must be stopped.

Regards,

Dr. Benjamin Jude Wright
