General Comment

Generative AI is nothing but a wasteful drain of time and resources. It's fueled by stolen work and is already on borrowed time. It will eventually feed on itself more than actual works, resulting in a cycle of self-poisoning. From a moral standpoint, allowing generative AI free reign is wrong. Artists work hard enough as is and this will only make it harder by allowing the legal theft of that hard work. From a logical standpoint, it's also an extremely poor investment. The resources needed to fuel generative AI is incredibly wasteful and the "AI bubble" will eventually pop, making the waste even more unnecessary. Generative AI is a dead end and should be discouraged at all possible levels.
