General Comment

I do not believe OpenAI should be able to scrape the internet or use the intellectual property of others without licensing agreements. If their models require intellectual labor and property of others, they can pay for it like any other company.

Companies like OpenAI are unnecessary for the future of the United States. Most of their models are full of errors and have proved embarrassing when used in the legal profession (my field). At any rate, OpenAI should not be given special privileges above other for-profit companies which, despite protestations or a veneer of research, is what they are.
