General Comment

This request can and is likely to be used to plagiarize the public and the average American's work. If left unchecked and unregulated, there is a potential that people will have the rights of their works removed and assimilated into an algorithm. Thus, there should be both regulations and compensation to add to the work of AI. It should be repeated that the invitation to collaborate on AI is purely an optional request instead of a demand by higher ups through an ultimatum or other threat to a person's livelihood. Therefore, there should, at the very least, be regulations and constant checks to ensure that the data used to train and test these models be given with consent through proper documentation from all involved parties and sources.
