General Comment

I have two concerns:

1. Google currently has an "A.I." system used in its default search results. This system frequently returns incorrect and in some cases dangerous answers. Until the issues with these search results are resolved, I am concerned about giving Google and OpenA.I. still more access to materials.
2. Open A.I. plans to use creative work made by other people without compensating the creators for their work. This is a blatant violation of current U.S. Copyright law; this sort of infringement should not be allowed.
