

PUBLIC SUBMISSION

As of: March 21, 2025
Received: March 15, 2025
Status: [REDACTED]
Tracking No. m8b-0mlk-3ybn
Comments Due: March 15, 2025
Submission Type: API

Docket: NSF_FRDOC_0001
Recently Posted NSF Rules and Notices.

Comment On: NSF_FRDOC_0001-3479
Request for Information: Development of an Artificial Intelligence Action Plan

Document: NSF_FRDOC_0001-DRAFT-6744
Comment on FR Doc # 2025-02305

Submitter Information

Name: sydney doyle Email:

[REDACTED]

General Comment

The burden of AI on individual creatives who simply want to share (or sell! we need to post examples of our work!) and find ourselves having our websites DDOS'd by the glut of AI data farming as -well- as find our personal styles and techniques cribbed artlessly and mashed together with other techniques in a soulless pile of digital visual slush being personally offensive to us, the AI does not and will not distinguish between things it is told to ignore and things it is told it may safely eat. How many aspiring authors want to keep their work entirely offline, away from peer comment entirely just to protect it from the theft machine? How many musicians will no longer share their work because the theft machine is only going to rip them off and destroy their industry? What of the small time artist who would like to develop their skill and technique within a certain school of design or aesthetic, and asks peers for feedback? They aren't going to be happy when the AI robber comes and carelessly stirs their dedicated and preserved style into the bucket with all the others it slurped up today. Neither will the AI, as outliers of style only pull it further away from your ultimate goal of it being able to swiftly reproduce something that is an aggregate of pop culture interests. It doesn't do that right now. All it does is steal our art, DDOS our websites and piss us off while it ruins our planet.