General Comment

AI has no place in art, especially when it cannot be regulated as it steals and is built on the backs of actual artists. Having ones livelihood stolen to train a machine that is designed to take career opportunities is not only abhorrent but both immoral and unethical. AI companies make millions off of the unpaid labor of artists they've never spoken to, merely fed their work into an algorithm and then reaped the rewards of. This will have devastating consequences, and lead to a generation of lost artists who no longer pursue their passion due to the knowledge a machine will always be chosen in favor of cost cutting measures over talent and hard work.
