

PUBLIC SUBMISSION

As of: March 21, 2025
Received: March 15, 2025
Status: [REDACTED]
Tracking No. m8b-0oof-jdi2
Comments Due: March 15, 2025
Submission Type: API

Docket: NSF_FRDOC_0001

Recently Posted NSF Rules and Notices.

Comment On: NSF_FRDOC_0001-3479

Request for Information: Development of an Artificial Intelligence Action Plan

Document: NSF_FRDOC_0001-DRAFT-6782

Comment on FR Doc # 2025-02305

Submitter Information

Name: Anonymous Anonymous

General Comment

I'm an artist, programmer, and writer.

AI, as it is currently, can not function without piracy of legitimate work. The courts would rule against my favor if I were to attempt the same thing in my own work. So it isn't even a stretch to call AI training what it is. Stealing.

That it's not illegal is absolutely stupid, and in the communities I participate in we actively discourage and ban any practitioners of AI on the spot.

Seeing anything AI generated typically pisses me off, and makes me not want to buy whatever it is attached to. This includes signs in businesses, games, and general artistic works.

It's easy to spot even by people who don't have the training I do. And its mere presence makes everything in my fields more expensive from a business standpoint. We're getting less work. So we must charge more to make ends meet. And when we do get work, it's always a rush job: We're typically fixing the mess AI created.

Businesses that hire AI artists, quickly learn that they must pay for a project a second time by a professional to get it right. And since they have deadlines passed along to us, we all end up with a inferior product, and it is so much more expensive.

Recognize these AI Techies for what they are. Scammers. Thieves. Grifters of society trying to work as little as possible for as much as possible.

They don't have any real solutions. They only have a cost. And that cost is, while difficult to track, long lasting.

We gotta stop thinking about "This Quarter" maximizing profits and burning the good will of clients. We need to build a lasting reliance on everyone's efforts together so we all end up doing well enough to keep eating and put away for retirement.