General Comment

AI's very existence depends on the outright theft of others' work and intellectual property. The obvious conclusion here is not that we should therefore allow AI companies to break the law. It's that we must force them to rethink and rework their systems to stop stealing. If they cannot do that, then we do not need AI. As it is, it produces massive quantities of garbage at enormous cost. We do not need to allow this, and we shouldn't.
