General Comment

OpenAI's entire business model is built on theft from artists, intellectuals, and basically anyone who has ever made or written anything. It's trash. Altman is trash, and these companies should not be allowed to steal work for momentary gain, especially when THEY are charging people to use their plagiarism machines. Please do not allow this to move forward because it is immoral and illegal. If someone stole Tesla's IP or proprietary info from Goldman Sach's people would be charged. The amount of money the artist or writer has should not mean they also don't get protection from theft of their work. Billionaires are not a protected class. They're barely even human so maybe rethink this nonsense.
