General Comment

It has already been shown that AI development has been incredibly damaging to artists. How can we allow tech corporations to steal from artists, writers and other working creatives to build their AI tech? Just as every other company must pay for their inputs - construction buying wood, automotive buying steel - if AI companies want inputs for their models, they should be paying artists. Artists are hard working people, most of whom are paid very little for the work they produce. We cannot allow art to become a soulless endeavor that is controlled by corporations.
