General Comment

Quite simply, if you cannot do something without breaking the law, then that act is by definition a CRIME. These AI companies are explicitly and knowingly commuting countless criminal acts each and every day.

If a citizen or small Buisness downloaded every single Disney movie, then sold those movie on a mass scale, would they not face serious legal repercussions?

Even if they slapped random filters or used every asset of these films in a random assortment of clips and audio lines, would they not still be taken to court for piracy and illegal reselling of copyrighted material?

We cannot allow one law for regurgitated slop churned out by resource depleting, soulless machines whilst talented artists, writers, and creators are left uncompensated for work done and forced out of these industries.

The death of creation is the death of the human soul.
