General Comment

The simple fact that this is even being considered is insane.

non-consenting data aggregation in general should be considered a violation of your privacy, as shown by every single website now needing to prompt you before they send their hordes of cookies. now, instead of your data being stolen, its the info for your livelihood being taken without your consent. profiteering off of someone else's art, even when modified is already illegal, this should be considered no different, and broad spectrum AI Image generation, non-consensual voice mimicry, and any artistic copying by data aggregation and learning algorithms should be illegal as well.

Please stop thinking with your wallets and consider the fact that if you let this go, the consequences could be massive. Not only for the individuals, but for you. Advances in this field could lead to ease of disinformation due to the increased accuracy in data mimicry, specifically with regards to vocal recognition, and given that you lawmakers speak in a public forum more frequently, you are more at risk for this. consider if you will, if mimicry becomes so advanced, that its impossible to tell the difference between your voice and the software's, and somebody, anybody, makes that software say incriminating things in your voice. This will be the reality if this software is left unchecked. Not to mention, all the independent businesses that will fail as a result of the removal of restraints to the software. Do not be fooled by smooth talking business men of million dollar mega corporations that only care about profit. this order will do nothing but harm the American people, whether through sowing distrust in your words among the population, or by killing thousands, if not tens of thousands of independent small businesses.

Consider the ramifications of your actions on yourself, and the people of this country. don't be fooled.
