General Comment

It seems utterly ridiculous to even have to argue against this. America doesn't need, want, nor should it be wasting time and resources getting a share in the "Generative AI Market". There is no more an economic incentive to buy into AI, then there was to buy into Beanie Babies or Tulips. The idea my government would fall for such a scam marketing tactic is unacceptable. On top of that, why would you think I want an AI allowing people to copy my style and art if wouldn't want other people using my copyrighted works for their own gain regardless. This makes me and all my collaborators less likely to do business in the US and I will make sure to inform every community I work in that the US is no longer safe to publish works in.
