General Comment

I am a writer, an artist, a musician, a person existing on the internet, and I do not consent to having my words, my art, my music -- my work, the fruits of my labor, the product of my thought and consideration and toil -- used as fodder for large-language models (erroneously called "artificial intelligence") intended to render me obsolete.

Enough is enough. It's time to stop permitting technologies of no actual utility to have a free ride on the backs of working creative people.

The creators of OpenAI have said openly that if they are forced to compensate creative people fairly, their company cannot survive.

Then let it die.

Sam Altman has said -- publicly, in front of God and everybody, with no apparent fear of being pelted with wet garbage wheresoever he goes -- that where the development of AI conflicts with the social contract, it is the social contract that will need to give way.

I do not say this lightly: this is the attitude of a sociopath. It amounts to an admission of criminal intent. Uphold the social contract. Serve the people of this country. Do your jobs and kill this damnfool idea.
