General Comment

If you found out the bakery was stealing flour from the supermarket to bake its bread you'd send the cops down immediately, right? Meanwhile, these people are coming out like "if I'm not allowed to steal other people's stuff my business is unsustainable."

What's even the point anymore?

You make something and it just gets gobbled up by some big machine and they are just like lmao I'm not paying you for it. Insult to injury they use it to make something which puts you out of business.

Might as well just stop making things. Seems to be what a lot of people are thinking.
