General Comment

Member of the public here who does want there to be regulations on AI. No AI company should be able to use an artist's work without their permission, and they should pay them for it. By artist, I pretty much mean anyone who has created something--any written or visual material. Any written work by anyone--fiction, nonfiction, reporting, science articles, textbooks, you name it. Same for visual works. Oh, and musical works, too. AI companies should not be allowed to STEAL people's creative works! And by the way, I think every generative AI product I've come across is stupid and soul-deadening. Nobody wants Google's often dangerously wrong "AI overview," no one wants weird AI customer service. Bring on the regulations and stop shoving AI down our throats.
