General Comment

The idea of having AI be able to steal someone's intellectual property without any consequences is a huge problem. It is objectively theft, and that is against the law. Making it an "exception" is opening a different can of worms. How much would there be able to be stolen? Not just random artists, but movies belonging to studios, and more. People's privacy and likeness is already on the line, with art being generated of them, themselves doing heinous acts.
