

PUBLIC SUBMISSION

As of: March 21, 2025
Received: March 15, 2025
Status: [REDACTED]
Tracking No. m8b-217y-jeba
Comments Due: March 15, 2025
Submission Type: API

Docket: NSF_FRDOC_0001

Recently Posted NSF Rules and Notices.

Comment On: NSF_FRDOC_0001-3479

Request for Information: Development of an Artificial Intelligence Action Plan

Document: NSF_FRDOC_0001-DRAFT-7947

Comment on FR Doc # 2025-02305

Submitter Information

Name: Anonymous Anonymous

General Comment

Despite all of the ethical, moral and regulatory concerns about AI and how it steals work from others and reposts it as its own or how it emits more carbon emissions than most small towns, I want to stay everything with AI is so painfully noticeable and honestly just like a majority of other Americans, anything that AI touches is so remarkably CHEAP looking. Its as if nobody cares about the product that they slap their AI stuff on or use it to promote and people have gotten so good at distinguishing when the tentacles of AI have touched anything from marketing, design and even promotion. AI is basically saying "we are cheap and we don't have a good product to invest time or money in so we're going to hire nobody to take labor and slap it on it to sell to others to buy an inferior product or sell an inferior idea."

In short, AI is the 2020s version of Colgate lasagna or the failed attempt of the Dilburrito. Nobody wanted it, nobody liked it, it was mass marketed to everyone. It was cheap and frankly it was horrible. Do you want to have anything you do associated with a boorishly dull and cheap product? No. So this is another major reason why I am against AI and the use of AI taking the rights of others to make product of its own so people can use that to lazily slap it on their other work (or lack of.) People know what AI does, who it steals from and frankly, they won't buy once they know.

Even when you do use it and you think you're covering it up by still using AI, believe us, WE KNOW you're using it for your project. Stop. No.