General Comment

I am in absolute opposition to this proposed plan. I believe that openAI having total copyright immunity will do untold damage to all Americans, both in and outside of creative spaces as it damages creatives' value, which in turn will lead to cultural stagnation, as rapid, unchallenged ai use will lead to compounding loss in creative pursuits as many will be pushed out of their jobs. For some reason, despite driving revenue and forming the backbone of profits and consumerism, Americans are increasingly being discarded from their jobs not for merit, but rather for short term gains that have no future beyond the immediate gain. Without nurturing a strong and healthy working class, our Economy and American way of life, are in danger of crumbling away that will leave everyone, no matter how rich, in danger.

I would like to emphasize, I do not dislike or hate AI. I grew up dreaming to befriend Data from StarTrek, to me, I see AI as one of humanity's next step of evolution, but companies like OpenAI do not and have not given me any confidence that they have anything but unhealthy, short sighted plans that will only destroy American Excellence if left unchecked.

These may be bold statements for why I believe one of the most under appreciated work forces in our country should not be overshadowed by trivial and empty promises that tech companies may be pushing. The ability for human individuals to be able to take an idea, words and images of the mind and be able translate these things to be shared is one of humanities greatest traits and should be cherished. Our entire recorded history of this planet is recorded by human artists and craftsmen, forging eternal recordings that inspire, educate and enrich cultures and people to come, to reject such a powerful part of our existence is outright inhumane and ungodly and will be the start of our end.
