General Comment

I am a professional artist who is appalled by the rampant theft and dishonesty displayed by these so-called AI companies. Their tools cannot be created without intellectual property theft and should therefore not exist.

If I demanded access to Disney's copyrighted work as an independent artist, with the claim that I cannot make a profit without it, that request would be ludicrous on its face and denied without question. Why should the claim of a multi-billion dollar corporation that they cannot make a profit without access to my copyrighted work be any different?

Any carve-out of copyright protection for these scam artists should and can not be considered. If we do so, in future decades we will find that the new leaders of the world are those that did not cater to the fantasies of AI promoters.
