General Comment

Copyright regulations on Artificial Intelligence must remain in place. The use of AI is a new and little-understood technology, and could become a danger to the American people if made free from the laws in place that protect shareholders and media organizations, including Fox, TikTok, Disney, and many other companies that define the United States and are important to our culture and history. I, as an individual, and others like me are held in contempt by the ways that AI can be used, and has already been used, to deprive us of the jobs that we, as hard-working Americans, rightly deserve. The proposal to free generative AI from copyright law is short-sighted and downwrite preposterous to those of us who respect the contributions to technology that this great country has already made! I wish for the people who make these laws reconsider their positions on this matter, and prevent this action from coming to pass.
