General Comment

It is deeply ironic how draconian copyright law has become for the average citizen. We aren't allowed to use a scrap of copyrighted music or video for anything we make, no matter how transformative and legally viable it is. Huge companies crush creativity and squeeze us for ad pennies because someone put 5 seconds of a song in their YouTube video. But now they want immunity to steal our own copyrighted material from us! The answer is No. Absolutely not. Take a short walk off a long bridge. Shove it so far up your a&^ that your money-grubbing fist bursts through your swollen, fetid mouth. Gen AI is a worthless technology that no one wants, sucking up all the world's electricity and accelerating green house gas emissions into the atmosphere smack in the middle of a climate crisis, for what? A stupid app bloating up my phone with adware that I'm just going to turn off? Get lost. YOU. CANNOT. HAVE. OUR. ART.
