General Comment

A product that relies on theft to sustain itself is not a product worth investing in. It is no different than the IP theft that our adversaries engage in, only we're asking the American public to allow it to be done to ourselves.

Sam Altman and his ilk have created a business model that is unsustainable in numerous ways and they are petitioning the government to allow them to prolong the bilking of investors and the general public and to buy them time to figure out a way to turn a profit. They are stealing the art, information, and intellectual output of millions of great American minds for financial gain. Their product threatens the job security of hundreds of millions of American workers which make up the bulk of the consumer class in this country. AI makes this country no smarter, no more advanced, and no more secure. In fact, it will do exactly the opposite of that.
