General Comment

The endorsement of Generative AI and support of its use in creative, academic, or administrative environments is guaranteed to lead to eroded accountability and credibility in these fields.

Generative AI in creative fields requires the use of a model trained on copyrighted works without the approval of the owner of these copyrights. These include small creatives, ranging from various artist and writers, musicians and voice actors, to large companies such as Walt Disney, Dreamworks, or Warner. Granting protections to Generative AI firms will prevent these parties from protecting their intellectual property rights from being used in a malicious manner.

As a creative in a smaller sense, I ask that you oppose this order to protect the rights of those that wish to create art, rather than those who wish to use that art to create an amalgamation of stolen works into a piece of work with no human spark behind its creation.
