General Comment

Frankly it is ridiculous that us artists keep having to defend our intellectual property time and time again. No, companies should not be able to train their AI on our work. They are already stealing our work they should not be given more power to steal even more of our hard earned human-made art. This impacts small businesses across the United States that make actual art to sell or promote their business. This impacts individuals and the drive people feel to make things. If companies want art, they can pay for it to be made by real human hands.
