General Comment

Hello,

I don't know if my words will be valued much but I still feel it important to voice it. Creativity is not something that should be taken away from people in the name of profit, many of the most beautiful works in this world were born of people and ideas.

OpenAI intends on turning all of it into fuel for an uncaring machine that produces content rather than art. This is what copyright protection should be used to fight, the data scraping clumping together of the work of millions of people who had actual passion and put in the work to bring that passion to life, all for the sake of selling snake oil to everyone telling them they can be an artist too with a subscription and some words.

People's voices will no longer belong to them, their ART will no longer belong to them, and what little art exists will be hidden away out of fear of the machine taking it, dissecting it and vomiting it out for profit. For the sake of all art, for the talented people who write, sing, paint and dream this cannot be allowed, OpenAI and all of its brethren cannot be allowed to steal it all so someone can boredly punch some lines in to receive Content and claim it their own.

It isn't even really artificial intelligence, it's just an algorithm using the data it scrapes to hallucinate an image.
