General Comment

OpenAI will have immunity from all lawsuits regarding copyright infringement. All other AI companies will follow.

- * I do not believe AI holds a place in the future of the US
- * AI steals from my livelihood as an American and profits off of theft
- * AI is overhyped and is fleecing the eyes of the American public.

Many AI companies have been accused of ripping copyrighted content to train their AI models. OpenAI currently faces several lawsuits from news outlets, including The New York Times, and has even been sued by well-known names like Sarah Silverman and George R.R. Martin. Apple, Anthropic, and Nvidia have also been accused of scraping YouTube subtitles to train AI, which YouTube has said violates its terms.
