General Comment

A basic skim on this would suggest that all forms of media would no longer be profitable or even really accessible to create for anybody that does not have access to things like Google or OpenAI. To somebody who works very hard to create original content and works, completely robbing myself and other people of such works belonging to myself and myself alone, especially now that I've been seriously developing a plan for developing my work into an official show and comic series, and in a group of friends with similar situations, this is straight up just ruining job opportunities. There's no other real way to put it. This is strongly discouraging and a threat to an entire career field.
