General Comment

AI has been stealing from innumerable people since it forced it's way into the public eye. These people claim to be making something new when it is built nigh exclusively off of stolen content to "train their AI". No business that relies on stealing should be legal, or even exist in the first place. These people are not using AI for the betterment of society, they have no plans on doing so. They are here to make money off of stealing from others, that's what they've always been after. They've stolen from artists, writers, musicians, coders, and countless more. This is a scourge we must be rid of, not encourage. And I'm sure you'll be hearing that a lot as the countless people they've stolen from remind you that stealing is stealing, we do NOT give them consent to use our personal posts, our pictures, our projects and more to build their empire upon. They should be penalized for everything they've already stolen, not given a wave of the hand and permission to do it freely.
