General Comment

We cannot have a world where Generative AI is allowed to run amok. It doesn't offer anything of value beyond the fact that the least scrupulous among us will get to pillage from other actual hard workers and parasitically leech off of them. Is this not a country that champions personal responsibility and work that results from the sweat off one's own brow? Why, then, would we allow people to steal the time and effort of others to make this slop that contributes nothing?

All this will do is make the American people even more of a laughing stock. Fools that allowed ourselves to be fooled by machines that siphon off others' work. We can't even do our own work? Now we must just eat another's filth like a human centipede of art and literature, constantly getting worse and more incestuous results in the process? It's embarrassing that this is even considered. If we Americans are as truly great as we say we are, we don't need to rely on technology that will only make us dumber and lazier, lopping up reheated leftovers that were hastily slammed together with no thought and nothing innovative to come out of it.
