General Comment

Hello. I would like the bill to be reconsidered and reevaluated due to the safety of US citizens. While the evolution of AI is always seen as a benefit for the current day for science, medicines, and architecture, I, as a US citizen who cares for a lot of older folks and children, am worried over the use of unmoderated AI in the online space. I've seen people make videos using AI that almost replicate people in vivid detail, and I worry of what is to come if we continue on the path that AI just uses anything and everything on the internet without any regulations or restrictions. The idea that media online on any website, like Facebook or X, being used to train an AI without any discrimination could replicate into things that could even become criminal content and I do not feel safe with this pursuit without stable laws in place to stop it.

That brings me to my point to mention that the actors on television, the animators for our children's cartoons, and all of our media are already being cloned into AI works. It feels like it would devolve into an easy to breach security risk, and I don't want that to happen to any and all of my fellow Americans. Creative works such as our television programs and streaming apps are our pleasure to view and interact with and pay for, but it feels like a termination to have unregulated AI scan and replicate the artists and workers who put their hardwork into what we already pay for. Our entertainment could be turned corrupt if AI continues to unlawfully steal their voices, faces, and works of art, and I don't want my fellow Americans to suffer a loss in more of our working force that allows us to feel a bit of reprieve in our day to day lives.

So I end off my comment with the want for the reconsideration of AI on the internet. The AI Plan may seem promising, but without the legal security of our online safety with the pursuit for more AI is hard to make me, an American, feel safe about this unlawful use of AI scanning all of our information and pictures that can be used to falsely accuse innocent people of very heinous crimes.
