I am a professional storyboard artist working in the film and animation industry. This is my statement for the US Government's AI Action Plan.

The current crop of generative A.I. products are pale replacements for legitimate and focused human effort.

The companies that seek to profit from their proliferation train their models on artwork, literature, and cultural works that represent the total of lifetimes' worth of skill and lived experience. This training is done without the consent of the original creators or compensation provided for the use of work, all of which constitutes theft. Theft on a colossal and egotistical scale that belies both a hubris and a lack of basic human decency in the leadership of these companies.

These very same companies then seek to use these models in competition with the very same human labor they are built upon. Effectively stealing both the artwork to train on and the livelihood in its wake.

This wicked scheme further disregards the public by siphoning huge amounts of power and water to make its heist of humanity. Fueling the climate crisis at the same time it fuels a labor crisis.

The US Government should act to limit generative A.I. and impose the strictest of copyright law to protect human artists and creators, protect the environment, and demand these companies destroy all models trained on artwork, literature, and data acquired without explicit consent.

Thank you for your time.

My name is Alexander York
