Given the fundamental limits to generative AI's capabilities and viable use cases, there is literally no benefit to be had from implementing legal protections for AI outside of the short-term financial gain for companies to wring from investors who have been intentionally misled by those companies as to what the technology does and how it works. Any lawmaker who grants generative AI legal rights not just matching, but beyond those granted to a human worker categorically does not have the interests of those working constituents in mind, and will be recognized thusly come next election season.
