

From: Annie Tandy
To: ostp-ai-rfi
Subject: [External] Business Owner Feedback Regarding the AI Action Plan
Date: Monday, March 17, 2025 9:21:14 AM

CAUTION: This email originated from outside your organization. Exercise caution when opening attachments or clicking links, especially from unknown senders.

I am one of many throughout the country that owns an online hyperlocal publication for families that writes about family-friendly things to do in our immediate area. We visit kid-friendly places, talk to business owners, and get feedback from other parents to put together guides to various venues, events, experiences, classes, camps, and more. We are giving families inside information that isn't available elsewhere online.

Being the owner of a technology and media company as well as a former chemical engineer, I see the value of the United States being at the top of our game, especially when it comes to the advancements being made in artificial intelligence. However, there are major destructive consequences that I don't see being considered.

Currently, AI is scraping content from the internet and serving that information with or without attribution. Let's face it, very few people are clicking through to the original content. That directly affects each and every business and individual spending time researching and writing that content. I know many hyperlocal website owners who have gone out of business because they stopped receiving click throughs to their websites, therefore didn't receive the ad revenue that kept them in business. That's lost quality content! If AI keeps going the way it is, all online content that is written by actual humans with discernment, experience, and expertise will disappear from the internet.

If sources of information that Americans trust are lost, then in turn AI won't be able to serve trustworthy information. All that will be left will be forums from random viewpoints that may or may not have ulterior motives for commenting. There's no quality control in that situation, resulting in poor information everyone will be using to make decisions in life. I don't see that as being good for our future. The only other type of website for families that would exist are the websites from the individual venues, which serve as advertisements for their business.

I am urging you to consider the consequences of scraping content that belongs to each and every individual, business, and organization. I don't want to live in a world where all of these expert business owners no longer exist and the only information I'm receiving is advertisements and opinions from random people I don't trust on a forum. If AI wants to scrape quality content, which it should, then AI companies should pay the content creators or not be allowed to use content that doesn't belong to them.

This email is approved for public dissemination. The email contains no business-proprietary or confidential information. Email contents may be reused by the government in developing the AI Action Plan and associated documents without attribution.

Annie
