

2/28/2025 via FDMS

Anonymous

Hi. I believe this is a terrible idea and a cash grab/handout to the already ultra wealthy. We threw money at the problem before and you got duped. China did it in less time, smaller team, worst chips, and better product. You think throwing more money is the way to go? The only time large sums of money are flung around this country it goes to inflated contracts donors, lobbyists, loyalists, political allies and friends. You all haven't even figured out how China did it. They said it was because of their work environment and how they worked together. How many Americans would say the same about theirs? If the workers are treated better and paid a livable wage you will have faster work and innovation. It's been proven with companies that limit what their CEO makes compared to their employee's salaries. But that doesn't sound American. American is now, pray to God, is a system where programs like this suck away our money, paying us just enough. Not even enough in most cases. This creates a repressed workforce that will do the bare minimum because you are paying them the bare minimum. When someone doesn't have more than the bare essentials you then create a population of people who can't crawl out of it. Right where you want us as laws are passed to keep the wealth flowing upward. This plan is a disgrace. These billionaires don't need ANOTHER handout for work that has no oversight other than from them and this is still alongside their government hands them millions and billions in subsidies already. The DoD failing audits and not an immediate target for DOGE is shifty. Y'all republicans talk about fiscal responsibility and getting the budget back under control and have managed to get just a few billion so far because of the cowards unwilling to reallocate these funds, the recently passed budget bill is just abysmal! You want to have an even budget but you ask to RAISE the debt ceiling AND give tax cuts to the very same people you give welfare checks to each year. My mother was on welfare growing up and Republicans have always talked down about social programs... unless it's a company. I just want a government that actually wants to help people and this AI initiative and tax bill do the opposite. I'm sorry I misspoke earlier. This is a MAGA government, not a republican one. They are distinctly different. It's a shame you all don't give a damn about your citizens.