My name is Braden Gregory, and I've been an artist for decades, and have slowly grown my skills the entire time. It's absolute theft letting some giant big company just scrub everything I've ever done over 30 or more years from the internet, which was out there to try and grow my own business, throw it in a blender with everyone else's art and hit a button to pop up something they can sell in just a few seconds. It's yet another unteathered tool for the ultra wealthy to harvest the work and efforts and skill of everyone too poor to sue them and stop them and get themselves even more and more and more wealthy.

The government needs to limit and break up monopolies that these very few people have over the rest of us, or the unfettered growth of capatalism will choke us all.
