

2/18/2025 via FDMS

Debbie Risto

I believe that we are inevitably going to have AI as the next evolution in human history. But as with every new innovation in the past, going too fast will be disastrous. Our personal privacy and safety are at stake here. Don't put the cart before the horse when allowing technology an open book. Regulations are a necessity that should not be bypassed. Any independent company forming AI has no interest in the individual needs of regular people. It has been my experience that without oversight and regulation these companies will use people as the test subjects for their business benefits. The main objective of these companies are to make profits and be first regardless of who or what may be harmed in the process. Prior to allowing AI into our daily lives there should be the personal ability to control said AI by each individual who uses it. We as users should be able to limit its oversight on how it affects our daily activities.