To whom it may concern,

AI is already lacking in properly defined safeguards and transparency requirements at the federal level. Ensuring "that unnecessarily burdensome requirements do not hamper private sector AI innovation" is appalling this early in the development of AI. If anything, the federal government should be limiting and tracking where these private companies are securing their information and holding them responsible for unlawful stealing of human created content. AI generated art already steals from the livelihood of my friends and many other Americans; if left unchecked, AI as a whole will impact many more Americans. Companies should also be held responsible for what their AI generates. Please ensure that instead of serving us up on a silver platter that Americans are protected from the predatory companies that want to harvest anything within their reach to cultivate their AI monstrosities.
